

TRANSCRIPTION

CALL FOR PAPERS

<http://www.landesbioscience.com/journals/transcription>

Transcription...

- is a new international, peer-reviewed journal launched in July 2010
- publishes high-quality articles providing novel insights, provocative questions and new hypothesis into the expanding field of gene transcription
- covers all aspects of prokaryotic and eukaryotic transcription
- welcomes manuscripts using conventional and innovative methodologies
- publishes Research Articles, Short Articles, Reviews, Commentaries, Editorials, Methods Articles, Meeting Reports and Points of View

Transcription topics of interest include...

- transcriptional initiation, elongation and termination
- promoter structure and function
- the role of cis-regulatory elements that affect gene function locally and globally
- the structure, function and regulation of general and specific transcription factors, RNA polymerases, repressors and activators
- connections between RNA processing and upstream events in transcription
- involvement of small RNAs in transcriptional gene silencing and genome defense
- interplay between nuclear architecture, genome organization and gene expression
- integration of transcriptional and translational response mechanisms to external stimuli
- cross-talk between transcription and chromatin

Submit a manuscript online: <http://transcription.msubmit.net>

Transcription offers...

- online publication of manuscripts within two weeks of acceptance
- no page and color charges for the first six issues of Transcription
- free open access for articles posted online until July 2011
- free open access for all articles one year after their publication (with optional purchase of open access from publication date)

Pre-submission enquiries are encouraged and may include decision letters and reviewers' reports of the same manuscript passed over by other peer-reviewed journals. Please send to: Editor-in-Chief, Alberto R. Kornblihtt (ark@fbmc.fcen.uba.ar), or Acquisitions Editor, Barbara Rattner (barbara@landesbioscience.com).
